Local government area boundaries in Scotland: 1974 to 1996

Between 1974 and 1996, most of Scotland had a system of two-tier local government, comprising nine Regions and 53 Districts. The island areas of Orkney, Shetland and Western Isles (renamed Na h-Eileanan an Iar following the Local Government (Gaelic Names) (Scotland) Act 1997) had a different structure, which were each a single-tier local government area. This structure was defined by the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973.

The first elections to the councils of the new local government areas took place in 1974, with the councils taking up their responsibilities on 16 May 1975.

This structure had been preceded since 1929 by 37 counties covering Scotland, including counties comprising each of the four major cities. These counties were divided into 196 districts with limited powers (also known as “landward districts”), and also contained 21 “large burghs” (which had a wide range of functions), and 176 “small burghs” which had certain powers including housing.

The Islands Areas, Regions and Districts were as follows, described in terms of the counties which existed before them:

The definition in legislation of the local government area boundaries is explained in Appendix A. Since being defined in the 1973 Act, some sections of some Region and District boundaries were amended as a result of our reviews. A list of those amendments appears at Appendix B.

The development and definition of electoral areas for these local government areas is described in more detail in our Information Paper Local government electoral arrangements in Scotland: 1974 to 1996.

This local government structure was replaced by 32 single-tier local government areas after the introduction of the Local Government etc (Scotland) Act 1994. The first elections to the councils of the new local government areas took place in 1995, and the councils took up their responsibilities in April 1996. The local government areas introduced by the 1994 Act and their subsequent development are described in our Information Paper Local government area boundaries in Scotland: 1995 onwards.

Appendix A – Legislative definition of local government areas

The full definition of the boundaries of the local government areas was set out by reference to pre-existing counties and their sub-divisions in Schedule 1 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973, the text of which is reproduced below.

The names of some of the District areas were changed shortly after their establishment. This table lists those alterations, which took place in accordance with section 23 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973, by resolution of the council of the local government area and by the consent of the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Local government area name defined in 1973 Act	Revised local government area name	Date of change
Merrick District	Wigtown District	1 Aug 1974
Bishopbriggs and Kirkintilloch District	Strathkelvin District	1 Aug 1974
Argyll District	Argyll and Bute District	1 Aug 1974
Cumbernauld District	Cumbernauld and Kilsyth District	1 Aug 1974
Lanark District	Clydesdale District	1980

3. In this Schedule references to existing polling districts shall mean those districts as bounded as at 16th May 1973.

Appendix B – Local government area changes 1976-1993

This Appendix lists alterations to local government areas which have resulted from our reviews in the period between the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 and the Local Government etc (Scotland) Act 1994.

Section 14(1) of 1973 Act required us to carry out reviews of all local government areas between 10 and 15 years after 16 May 1975, (i.e. between 16 May 1985 and 16 May 1990), and every 10 to 15 years thereafter. In addition, under section 14(2), we have the power to review any part of any local government area at our discretion. Under section 15 and Schedule 5, Ministers have the power to direct us whether or not to carry out reviews of any local government area.

We completed an initial series of administrative area reviews in 1975 and 1976 as a result of Directions from the Secretary of State on 22 August 1974 and 18 September 1974, and our discretionary powers. We completed those reviews before we conducted our Initial Reviews of Electoral Arrangements for the new local government areas.

We began further local government area reviews under our discretionary powers in 1981, and reported between 1982 and 1992 prior to our Second Reviews of Electoral Arrangements.

Ministers implement the recommendations of our reports by means of Statutory Instrument. In a small number of cases, noted in the tables below, the changes implemented by Ministers differ from our recommendations. Full documentation on all of these Reviews is available from our website.

The reviews which we conducted in 1975 and 1976, prior to our Initial Reviews of Electoral Arrangements, are listed in this table:

LGBCS report	Boundary altered	Location	Statutory Instrument
1	Lochaber / Skye & Lochalsh Districts	Glenelg & Arnisdale	1976/340
2	Hamilton / Motherwell Districts	Strathclyde Park	1977/15
